Management Research Group (MRG), a global supplier of assessment-based human resource development systems, today announced the hiring of David Ringwood as vice president of client development.

Ringwood's responsibilities at MRG include advising the consultants, or network associates, who sell MRG's assessment products to businesses, human resource professionals, sales leaders and psychologists. MRG's extensive database of research helps guide companies in the areas of leadership, work/life balance, sales and executive coaching.

"We know how critical it is to have a strategic focus on developing people in order to achieve and sustain business success. David has been one of our network associates, he knows the challenges they face, and he will be able to be hands on in a geographic area that is critical to our success," says Tricia Naddaff, president of MRG. "He is already accredited and licensed in both our Strategic Leadership Development(TM) and Personal Directions(R) suite of assessments."

Prior to joining MRG, Ringwood was with the HR Consulting division of MERC Partners, Ireland's leading indigenous executive search and HR consulting professional services firm. During his tenure, Ringwood sold and managed many communications coaching assignments, management development programs, assessment based projects and management development plans.

Ringwood is accredited with MRG's products, as well as the British Psychological Society. He is a member of the Irish Institute of Business Analysis & Consulting (IBAC) and currently serves as its president.

Ringwood will work out of Dublin, Ireland and MRG's offices in Munich, Germany.
